The Transition in Central and Eastern European Politics Dec 09 2020 This one-of-a-kind book gives readers a general overture to the regions of Russia, Bulgaria, Hungary, and Poland. It helps them realize why states which shared a mutual political legacy for 45 years can be so different today. In addition, it helps readers draw comparative conclusions to determine what is universal and what is incidental. This broad, yet detailed, comparative study provides insights into the factors which have affected the economic, political, and social development in Central and Eastern Europe's socialist states since the fall of the Berlin Wall.

Suitable for those interested in an Introduction to Comparative Politics, Global Issues, Central and Eastern European Comparative Politics, and Politics of Post-Communism.

Case Studies in Environmental Management in Central and Eastern Europe Jan 10 2021 As Central and Eastern European countries queue up to become members of a widely expanded European Union, the question of how their environmental laws and performance can become consistent with current standards has become of paramount importance. Forecasts are largely gloomy, with some commentators suggesting that it will take decades for full compliance to be achieved. This casebook presents the experiences of 14 companies in integrating environmental considerations in day-to-day operations in these emerging economies. The companies, both large and small, represent different sectors in the Czech Republic, Estonia, Hungary, Latvia, Lithuania and Poland. The book presents best-practice examples from companies that have successfully integrated environmental concerns into business management and improved their environmental as well as economic performance as a result. They show that different types of change are needed: technical, organizational and behavioural, and that only companies that embrace change can be successful in the big picture that is opening up for these countries.

Library Economics in Central and Eastern Europe Nov 19 2021 Information is the currency of policy debate, and so it is important to make available consistent and timely data about the operation of libraries, if these essential institutions are to be developed in tune with modern needs. The aim of this study has been to provide a platform of statistical information about library activities in Central and Eastern Europe. It has attempted to describe their scope, scale and different organisations and relate these to the resources they consume. Having established what the extent of these activities is, it is hoped that it will be easier to maintain the flow of information in future years. The objective of this study has been to collect and aggregate data on libraries in Central and Eastern Europe (C & EE) and to contribute to policy analysis in this domain as the countries concerned move towards membership of the EU. The data collected covers libraries' costs and activities primarily for the years 1990/1 to 1992/3. The countries selected for study were those which, at the time the research was commissioned, had either signed or were close to signing an association agreement with the EU, namely Bulgaria, Czech Republic, Estonia, Hungary, Latvia, Lithuania, Poland, Romania, Slovak Republic and Slovenia. The work relates to earlier studies in similar format covering EU and EFTA countries {Ramsdale, P. Library Economics in Europe: An update 1981-90 EUR Report 15903 En, 1995) and begins, subject to the normal hazards, to allow international comparisons to be made both between the countries which are the subject of this study and those covered in the earlier work. This work helps overcome the difficulties of accessing documents which are not widely circulated internationally, or are subject to linguistic difficulties and standardisation problems, particularly in the realm of economic data. As for previous studies, no primary survey work was undertaken. Survey forms were not sent to individual libraries but to people at national level involved in the production or use of the various national library statistical surveys who were asked to map their data onto standardised forms and to verify the results and deal with queries. The study adopts the six library sectors and other definitions originally developed by UNESCO as incorporated in ISO 2789 and reports on libraries' expenditure and activities within this framework. Survey questionnaires were despatched to all relevant countries in 1995 and a database was constructed on the basis of these returns, published sources and information supplied by UNESCO. Gaps were filled by grossing of both activity and financial data. The study 'Library economics in Central and Eastern Europe' has collected and aggregated data on libraries in 10 Central and East European countries. The study adopts the six library sectors and other definitions originally developed by Unesco as incorporated in ISO 2789 and reports on libraries' expenditure and activities within this framework. It covers primarily the years 1990/91 to 1992/93. The findings of the study begin to allow international comparisons to be made both between the countries covered by this study and the EU Member States.

The Routledge Handbook to Regional Development in Central and Eastern Europe Feb

20 2022 Twenty-five years into transformation, Central and Eastern European regions have undergone substantial socio-economic restructuring, integrating into European and global networks and producing new patterns of regional differentiation and development. Yet post-socialist modernisation has not been without its contradictions, manifesting in increasing social and territorial inequalities. Recent studies also suggest there are apparent limits to post-socialist growth models, accompanying a new set of challenges within an increasingly uncertain world. Aiming to deliver a new synthesis of regional development issues at the crossroads between 'post-socialism' and 'post-transition', this book identifies the main driving forces of spatial restructuring in Central and Eastern Europe, and charts the different regional development paths which take shape against the backdrop of post-crisis Europe. A comparative approach is used to highlight common development challenges and the underlying patterns of socio-economic differentiation alike. The issues investigated within the Handbook extend to a discussion of the varied economic consequences of transition, the social structures and institutional systems which underpin development processes, and the broadly understood sustainability of Central and Eastern Europe's current development model. This book will be of interest to academics and policymakers working in the fields of regional studies, economic geography, development studies and policy.

Vocational Education and Training in Central and Eastern Europe Jan 22 2022

This report assesses the current situation regarding vocational training in Central and Eastern Europe and suggests projects and working methods that would be consistent with the mission of the Commission of the European Communities' European Training Foundation. Sections 1 through 4 focus on the following: the existing system's inability to train individuals to become instruments of political, economic, and social change and for training workers and to cope with unemployment and economic upheaval resulting from political reform; the necessity of international aid to reform vocational training in Central and Eastern Europe; key issues in global action to define strategies and build a new system in Central and Eastern Europe; and principles and themes that Western countries must observe when sharing their training expertise with Central and Eastern Europe. Chapter 5, which deals with the mission, working program, and methods of the European Training Foundation, proposes that the foundation act as an effective resource center/clearinghouse, use local expertise, and give priority support to integrated projects designed to help establish a vocational training system, support the creation of the instruments/resources needed for a rational training policy, and train vocational policymakers and practitioners. The Neolithic and Early Chalcolithic Farmers of Central and Southwest Anatolia

Feb 08 2021 This research presents the qualitative and quantitative data collected from the architecture within ten Neolithic and Early Chalcolithic settlements in the Central and Southwestern regions of modern-day Anatolia, the larger part of Turkey lying on the 'Asian side' to the east of Istanbul. The sites investigated are: Aþýklý Höyük, Çatalhöyük, Canhasan III, Canhasan I, Güvercinkayasý, Höyücek, Bademaðacý, Erbaba, Hacýlar and Kuruçay. After investigating the interplay between theory and methodology in order to establish a research methodology, the work offers a general overview of the topography and climate of Central and Southwest Anatolia, reviews the current state of archaeological knowledge about prehistoric subsistence and settlement patterns and explains the selection of the ten sites for further study. The qualitative and quantitative data for these ten sites are then presented and analysed and the concluding chapter considers to what extent the research has been able to contribute to current theories about household and community within the Near East. It makes some general observations about the relationship between individual households and the wider community over region, subsistence patterns and time, sets the research within the wider field of settlement studies and identifies the need for further research.

Assessing the Balance of Power in Central-Local Relations in China Aug 29 2022 How do we understand the evolution of central-local relations in China during the reform period? This book addresses this question by focusing on eight separate issues in which the central-local relationship has been especially salient - government finance, investment control, regional development, administrative zoning, implementation, culture, social welfare and international relations. Each chapter introduces a sector and the way the center and various local governments have shared or divided power over the different periods of China's reform era. The balance of power is gauged dynamically over time to measure the extent to which one level of government dominates, influences or shares power in making decisions in each of these particular domains, as well as what is likely to occur in the foreseeable future. The authors assess the winners and losers of these changes among key actors in China's society. The result provides a dynamic view of China's changing power relations.

Religion and the Conceptual Boundary in Central and Eastern Europe Feb 29 2020 This volume concentrates on the "conceptual boundary" through Europe which is determined by Western and Eastern Christianity. The single articles research how this boundary has developed in different periods and epochs and in different places. They also show that the boundary has never been a stable and defined division, but that it was also subject to change and development and a place of encounter and exchange between religions and cultures.
